The second plenary of RK's first national congress decided that the union's online organ will be called Kommunisten ['The Communist']. The web address will soon be changed to www.kommunisten.no, but we will retain the domain maoisme.no for a transitional period.

The main reason for the name change is that we want a more serious profile for the online organ, and a name that can be used for a long time to come. Kommunisten, in its definite form, is a name that would suit a newspaper just as well as a website.

The name change does not signal a turn away from Maoism. We emphasize that RK is still a Maoist organization, and that the editorial content of the website will continue to express a Maoist line. However, we hope that the new name will make the website more interesting for readers in the communist movement who do not consider themselves Maoists.
